Basic strokes Use light pressure and knockdowns on uppercuts, use more pressure. I'll prove this video below. Paper matters As I mentioned in the first video, the right paper keeps the brush tips in great condition, so look for ultra-smooth paper designed for use with brush pens and markers. My favorites are: Keeping the brush pen You can really keep the pen, but it's convenient for you, but one thing you need to do is keep it at an angle of roughly 45 degrees, as the video lesson shows. FREQUENTLY ASKED AM I a hand lettering beginner, how can I learn? You can start out by reading my post All you need to know is to learn hand letters. It's a great start if you don't know anything about hand letters. If you need help practicing the technique or just prefer videos, you can check out this post in my recommendations for hand letters classes you can take for free: The best online hand lettering classes you need to get right now. What pens with the best hand letters? You don't need any fancy and expensive brush pens to start with hand letters. If you have a pair of Crayola markers at home, then everything is ready! The Crayola marker does not have a brush tip, but it is still one of the most popular pens with letters. If you still want to invest in some quality brush pens, here are my recommendations: Tombow Dual Brush Pen - These brush pens have two sides. There is a flexible brush tip on one side and a fine tip on the other side that can be used to add smaller details or improve minor fixes. Tombow Fudenosuke - This brush pen has a small brush tip that is much easier to learn than the larger tip of brush feathers. If you have a hand in letters newborn, then this pen I recommend you to get. Pentel Arts Pocket Brush Pen - This brush pen is quite economical and affordable brush pen. The pen can be refilled, so when the bristle wears out, just replace it instead of buying a brand new pen that lasts longer than other brush pens. What's the difference between hand letters and calligraphy? In a nutshell, calligraphers write letters, letterers draw them, and printer designs the form to make the written word more readable. Another big difference between the tools and techniques used to create hand letters or calligraphy. What does hand letters mean? Hand lettering essentially uses as many brush strokes as you need, rather than keyboard-type them. This is different from calligraphy, where we create letters and words with basic strokes. It often has letters with better hand-written letters than calligraphy. Therefore, in particular, the initials are a great alternative to calligraphy for projects that are too large, such as large boards other indications. You'll need these printable worksheets: Download the following PDF images, print them on brush pen-friendly paper (e.g. HP Premium Choice Laser Jet Paper) and start with the letters. You can either draw directly from the top or grab a piece of tracking paper and go through it as many times as you want. Hand Lettering Tips To get the most out of your exercise time, here are some tips that can improve your letters right away: Hold your pen at a 45 degree angle when using letters Lift your pen after each stroke Go slowly! As you slow down, your stroke becomes much more consistent. Read more handwritten tips here! The best free hand letters practice tables 1. 10 Free hand letters alphabets you need to practice 2.
